How Would You Like To Have A Rock Garden?

SEP 10 1931

A Rock-Garden is easily acquired by sowing seeds of rock plants during July and August. The seed, if planted in the open in a small garden patch of pulverized soil and slightly protected over winter, will produce healthy blooming plants next spring.

You know that rock-garden plants are usually sold at an average of $2.50 per dozen.

You may have an abundance of the most lovely varieties for the small expenditure of only $1.50, and besides, you will have the pleasure of watching them grow.

Below is a list of very beautiful sorts, which every rock-garden expert cherishes. Incidentally, it is not necessary to have rocks in order to have a rock-garden. These rock plants mixed with your other perennials in beds will give the whole an exotic charm, and present to you a particularly bright and charming appearance in the spring, when your tulips are blooming.

Picture yourself, thick mats of lovely pink and blue, lavender and orchid colors, and you will have an inkling of what rock-garden plants would do to cheer you.

Here is a list of the most charming and most easily grown from seeds.

You may have one package each for only $1.50.

Ordinarily, these seeds are sold at from 25c to 60c per package.

This is purely a "Good-Will" offer, so that you may have a soft spot in your heart for SCHENLEY GARDENS when times are better. If you do not care for the whole collection please make your choice at 25c per package.
